PREFACE.

The New-York Civil List has now reached the fourth year of its publication; and in preparing the present volume for the press, many of the lists have been carefully compared with the original records, and errors which had unavoidably appeared in the former editions have been corrected. The list of Members of Assembly, hitherto imperfect, has been completed from one of the early journals found in the library of the New-York Historical Society. Slight imperfections in the original records occasionally leave a date or name somewhat doubtful; but, with a few exceptions, which are commonly indicated by notes, the following pages will be found to embrace a reliable summary of our principal state and county officers, from the organization of a state government to the day of going to press.

The value of a concise manual of reference, containing historical lists of public officers, is recognized by all who have occasion to refer to facts connected with personal history, or events associated with the administration of public officers; and it is equally useful for daily reference, in affording aid to legal investigations, in furnishing political precedents, and in enabling one to fix upon particular dates, by the connection of events with men in public life.

With a few exceptions, the following lists begin with the origin of the district or office to which they relate, if since the revolution; or, if they existed previously, with the commencement of that memorable period. It is peculiarly gratifying to preserve the names of those who enjoyed the confidence, represented the claims, and vindicated the rights of our country, through that critical period of our history; nor is it less important that the names of those in whom the public have united their confidence in the selection of candidates for office should be preserved, as well on account of the historical importance belonging to them, as that the consequences of public acts, of whatever kind, may be traced to their origin, and the authors receive the praise or blame they may deserve.

History is but a recital of men's acts, and it is instructive to trace a public man through the various stations he has filled, and note the stages of his rise, it may be, to the highest office in the gift of a free people. To the historian, the biographer, the legislator and the incumbent of public office, these data are indispensible, and to every intelligent citizen they are matters of daily practical interest.

A brief historical note is usually placed at the beginning of each list, affording aid for reference to those not familiar with the subject, and a general knowledge of the duties of the several offices. Our limits required these notices to be concise, but they are generally accompanied with references to more ample information.

That errors may occur in regard to residences of public officers is possible, as this information has been in most cases derived from personal recollection. The changes that have been made in the mode of appointment, and especially such as have transferred to county courts or boards of supervisors appointments previously recorded in the office of the secretary of state, render the completion of serial lists of some officers difficult and uncertain, from the scattered condition of the records and the irregular manner in which they have been kept.

The indulgence of the public is solicited to these unavoidable imperfections; and the editor will feel especially favored with any suggestion or information that may tend to rectify errors, supply omissions, or enhance the accuracy and utility of the work.

THE GREAT SEAL OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK
EXCELSIOR

THE

NEW-YORK CIVIL LIST.

PART I.

CIVIL DIVISIONS.

The State of New-York is divided by law into counties, towns, cities and villages, for civil and municipal purposes; into districts, for judicial purposes and the election of representative officers; and into school districts, for the maintenance of schools.

Counties are erected and their boundaries changed by the Legislature; and, with the exception of Hamilton county, are each entitled to at least one member in Assembly. There are elected in each county[1] a sheriff, clerk, district attorney, treasurer, county judge, special judge (in certain counties[2]), two justices of sessions, a special surrogate (in counties where that office is separate from judge), four coroners, three superintendents of the poor,[3] and at least one school commissioner to each assembly district.[4]

Sheriffs, clerks, district attorneys, county treasurers, superintendents of the poor and school commissioners are elected for three years, and, with special exceptions,[5] are paid by fees; judges and surrogates are elected for four years, and receive salaries fixed by the several boards of supervisors.

The board of supervisors consists of one member from each town and ward in each county, and meets annually for the settlement of its accounts, the apportionment of taxes, and the regulation of its internal affairs. It possesses a limited legislative power, and appoints a county sealer of weights and measures, inspectors of plank roads and turnpikes, and a few other minor officers.

[1] Excepting in New-York county.
[2] Cayuga, Chautauque, Jefferson, Oneida, Orange, Oswego, St. Lawrence and Tioga.
[3] Supervisors may determine upon one superintendent of the poor. Albany and New-York counties have none.
[4] Except in New-York and Kings. (See chap. 179, Laws 1856.)
[5] The clerk in Erie, and district attorney in Albany, Erie, Genesee, Onondaga, Rensselaer and Washington counties receive salaries. School commissioners receive salaries.

TOWNS.

Towns were erected by the Legislature until 1849, when power was given to the several boards of supervisors (except in New-York county), by a vote of two-thirds of all the members elected, to divide or alter the bounds of any town or erect new ones, when such division does not place parts of the same town in more than one assembly district. A survey and map of towns, thus changed or erected, are filed in the secretary's office, and the action of the board is published in the appendix to the Laws of the following session. Towns are also erected by the Legislature.

There are elected in each town (not excepted by statute) a supervisor, town clerk, three assessors, a collector, one or two overseers of the poor, one or three commissioners of highways,

[1] Parts of Montgomery, Herkimer and Oneida provisionally annexed. Previous to March 6, 1801, Montgomery, Herkimer and Oneida counties extended to the St. Lawrence river.

[2] As Charlotte; changed April 2, 1784. When erected it embraced in Vermont the present counties of Franklin, Chittenden, Addison and Rutland. In New-York all east of a line drawn from St. Regis to the NW corner of the present county of Saratoga.

four justices of the peace, constables (not exceeding five), a sealer of weights and measures, two inspectors of elections to each election district, one overseer of highways in each road district,[1] and as many pound-masters as the electors shall determine. Assessors are elected for three years, justices for four years, and all others for one year. All are paid by fees, or a per diem compensation for the time employed.[2]

Towns are divided into school districts, in each of which are chosen three trustees, a clerk, collector and librarian. Trustees are elected for three years, the others for one year.

In the following table, the names of existing towns only are given, and the dates of erection are those on which they were first recognized by the laws of the state. Many had previously existed under patent in the colonial period.

CITIES.

Cities are incorporated by the Legislature, with certain municipal privileges that vary with their several charters. They are divided into wards and districts, for the better administration of their internal affairs. The officers consist of a mayor, elected annually;[1] a common council or board of aldermen, elected from the several wards; a recorder (except in Auburn, Brooklyn, Rochester and Syracuse); a clerk (except in Albany, Troy and Poughkeepsie); a marshal (in Auburn, Hudson, Oswego, Poughkeepsie, Schenectady, Troy and Utica), and such other judicial and administrative officers as are authorized in their respective charters.

The charter elections, in Hudson, Buffalo and Brooklyn, are held on the day of the general state election; in New-York, on the first Tuesday in December; in Auburn, Oswego, Poughkeepsie, Rochester, Schenectady, Syracuse, Troy and Utica, on the first Tuesday of March; in Albany, on the second Tuesday of April.

[1] Except in Albany and New-York, where he holds two years.

The following list contains the cities of the state, their location, the dates of their charters, and the number of wards in each :

VILLAGES.

Villages were incorporated by the Legislature only, until 1847, when a general law was passed, allowing the citizens of any town not included in an incorporated village, and with a resident population of not less than three hundred persons within one square mile, to become a corporation under the provisions of the act. When, in the judgment of the Legislature, the objects of these corporations cannot be attained by the general law, they may pass special acts for that purpose.[5]

The election of village officers occurs annually on the first Tuesday of March, unless otherwise directed by special act, and unless a town meeting shall be held on that day, when it is held on the day after.

The officers of villages, under the general law, are five trustees, three assessors, a collector, treasurer and clerk, three street commissioners (when such village shall be a separate road district), such number of fire wardens, not exceeding five, as the trustees may direct to be elected, and one pound-master.

PART II.

CIVIL OFFICERS.

GOVERNORS.

The executive power in New-York, while a colony, was vested in a governor and council of twelve members, appointed at will by the king, who issued instructions for their guidance, extending to every common contingency and changeable at the royal pleasure, but seldom materially altered.

At the beginning of the Revolution, the salary of the governor was £1,500 currency, and perquisites amounting to as much more.[1]

From 1777 to 1822 the governor was elected triennially. He was a member of the council of revision and president of the council of appointment. Under the late and present constitution the governor is elected biennially. He is commander-in-chief of the military and naval forces of the state; may convene the Legislature, or senate only, on emergencies,[2] and possesses the pardoning power.[3]

His qualifications and general duties are defined by the constitution,[4] and he receives a salary of $4,000 per annum.

He recommends to the senate the appointment of the officers hereinafter mentioned, and appoints commissioners of deeds in other states, notaries public, and such other officers as are from time to time directed by special acts; he fills most of the vacancies occurring in office (excepting assemblymen, state senators and congressmen) until a regular election or appointment can be made, and may remove, under limitations prescribed by statute,[5] most state and county officers.[6]

He communicates to the Legislature, at the beginning of each session, and from time to time by message, a statement of the financial condition of the state, and recommends such measures as

[2] Until 1821 the governor might prorogue the Legislature from time to time, not exceeding sixty days in a year.

[3] Under the first constitution, this extended, in cases of murder and treason, to a respite until the next session of the Legislature only, when the latter might pardon, commute or direct the execution of sentence. In treason and cases of impeachment he is still thus limited.

he may deem expedient, and is charged with the general execution of the laws. In case of vacancy, his place is filled by the lieutenant-governor or the president of the senate.

The term of office of the governor, and of all other officers not expressly excepted by law, begins with the civil year next after their election.

The civil and political year formerly commenced on the first day of July,[1] but is now defined by the constitution to begin on the first day of January.[2] The fiscal year of the state begins on the first day of October.

[1] John Tayler acted as governor from February 24 to July 1, 1817.
[2] Nathaniel Pitcher acted as governor from the death of Clinton, February 11, 1828, till the expiration of the term.
[3] Resigned March 12, 1829. Enos T. Throop acted as governor till the expiration of the term.

LIEUTENANT-GOVERNORS.

The lieutenant-governor is elected in the same manner and for the same term as the governor. He is, ex-officio, president of the senate, a commissioner of the canal fund and of the land office, a member of the canal board, a trustee of the Idiot asylum, a regent of the university, and a trustee of the capitol and of the new state hall. He acts as governor in cases of vacancy occurring in that office, and receives $6 for each day's attendance in the performance of his official duties.

in relation to the publication and distribution of the Laws, the issuing of patents for land, commissions, pardons and licenses; the filing of applications from aliens and from companies formed under general laws,[1] and the issuing of notices for elections. He reports annually to the Legislature the statistics of pauperism and crime received from the several counties, and, from time to time, upon such other subjects as may be required by law or resolution of either branch of the Legislature. At the opening of each session, he attends and administers to the members of assembly the constitutional oath.

This officer, in the colonial period, was appointed by the crown. From 1777 to 1822 he held his office under the council of appointment, of which he was, ex-officio, clerk. From 1822[2] to 1846 he was appointed for a term of three years, by an open, separate nomination and subsequent joint ballot of the senate and assembly. He is now elected[3] for a term of two years, and receives a salary of $2,500.[4] He appoints a deputy, who is clerk of the land office, and the necessary clerks in the several departments of his office.

COMPTROLLERS.

By a resolution of the provincial convention, Comfort Sands was appointed auditor-general, for settling certain public accounts. On the 23d of March, 1782, he resigned, and the governor and council of appointment were authorized to appoint an auditor, whose office should continue two years. It was subsequently continued, by several acts, until February 17, 1797, when the office of comptroller was created, and continued by repeated extension of two and three years, until February 28, 1812, when it was permanently organized.

The comptroller is the auditor of the public accounts, excepting of those payable from the canal and bank funds. He is, ex-officio, a commissioner of the land office and of the canal fund, a member of the canal board, a trustee of the Idiot asylum, a trustee of the capitol and new state hall, and has numerous and responsible duties in relation to the payment of the current expenses of the state, the management of funds, collection of taxes, loaning of moneys, and other duties directed by general laws or authorized by special acts.

By an act of April 12, 1822, this office, having previously been filled by the council of appointment, was made subject to appointment for a term of three years, by joint ballot of the Legislature, in the same manner as the secretary of state. The present constitution requires his election biennially. He receives a salary of $2,500, and is at present allowed a deputy, accountant and eleven clerks.

TREASURERS.

The provincial convention appointed Peter Van Brugh Livingston, treasurer, to disburse the moneys raised and issued in the revolutionary operations of the day, and he was retained in that important station until after the establishment of a state government.[1] The very great responsibility of this office, which was at an early day the principal financial organ of the state, led to the unique custom of naming the incumbent by special act; and a memorable event that occurred near the beginning of this century, impressed the importance of frequent accountability and a short official term.[2] The treasurer continued to be appointed by special acts for short periods until 1822, when this office was directed to be filled by annual appointment of the Legislature.

Under the present constitution, the treasurer is elected for two years, and his duties have been narrowed down to the receipt of moneys, and the payments of drafts upon the warrants of the comptroller, auditor of the canal department, superintendent of the bank department, and superintendent of public instruction.

The treasurer is, ex-officio, a commissioner of the land office and of the canal fund, and a member of the canal board and of the board of state canvassers. He receives a salary of $1,500, and is allowed a deputy, book-keeper and clerk.

ATTORNEY-GENERALS.

The office of attorney-general existed under the colonial government, in which, besides the ordinary duties of public attorney, he was charged with the preparation of letters patent for corporations and grants of land, the fees from which were highly lucrative. John Tabor Kempe was the last attorney-general, under the English government.

Under the first constitution, this office was filled by the council of appointment; from 1822 to 1846, by joint ballot of the Legislature, for a term of three years, and since 1846 by popular election, with a term of two years. Besides being the legal prosecutor in behalf of the state, the attorney-general is a commissioner of the land office and of the canal fund, a member of the canal board and of the board of state canvassers, and a trustee of the capitol and of the new state hall. He receives a salary of $2,000.

STATE ENGINEERS AND SURVEYORS.

The office of surveyor-general existed under the colonial government, the last incumbent being Alexander Colden. It was renewed in an act passed March 20, 1781, for raising two regiments for the defence of the state, on bounties of unappropriated lands, and was filled by the council of appointment until 1822, when the appointing power was given to the Legislature, and continued till the office was abolished. In 1803 the surveyor-general was made a commissioner of the land office, in 1821 a state canvasser, in 1817 a canal commissioner; and he has had numerous special duties imposed by acts relative to the sale and settlement of lands, adjusting disputed titles and Indian claims, laying out of roads and other internal improvements, and matters relating to the salt springs, reserved village plots, and other property in which the state had an interest.

In the constitution of 1846[4] the office of surveyor-general was replaced by that of state engineer and surveyor. He is chosen at a general election, holds his office two years, and is, ex-officio, a trustee of state hall, a commissioner of the land office, and member of the canal board and of the board of state canvassers. He also has general duties in relation to the railroads and canals, not required of the former officer,[5] and must be a practical engineer. His salary is $2,500.

BANKING DEPARTMENT.

The act creating a safety fund[4] directed the appointment of three bank commissioners, holding their office two years, and charged with the duty of visiting banks, examining their condition, and reporting annually to the Legislature the results of their labors. The governor and senate were to appoint one of the commissioners, the banks of the 1st, 2d and 3d senate districts another, and those of the 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th, the third. They received a salary of $1,500 out of the bank fund. By an act of May 14, 1840, a fourth bank commissioner was to be appointed, and banks under the general law were made subject to their visitation. The office was abolished April 18, 1843, the reports of banks being thereafter made to the comptroller.

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.

The office of superintendent of common schools was created June 19, 1812, and continued until April 3, 1821, when it was abolished by a clause in the appropriation bill of that year, and its duties vested in the secretary of state, who generally transacted the business by a deputy. By act of March 30, 1854, the office of superintendent of public instruction was created, to be filled by joint ballot of the senate and assembly for a term of three years. His salary is $2,500, and he is allowed a deputy, and the necessary clerks, not exceeding three, whose aggregate salary may not exceed $3,000. He is by virtue of his office a regent of the university, and it is his duty to visit, as often as may be practicable, such of the schools and academies of the state as he may deem expedient, to inquire into their course of instruction, management and discipline, and report annually to the Legislature.

CANAL DEPARTMENT.

A joint resolution of the Legislature, of March 15, 1810, appointed Gouverneur Morris, Stephen Van Rensselaer, De Witt Clinton, Simeon De Witt, William North, Thomas Eddy and Peter B. Porter, to explore a route for a canal to Lake Erie, and report.

On the 8th of April, 1811, the above named, with Robert R. Livingston and Robert Fulton, were appointed to consider all subjects relating to canals, to petition congress, and adopt such other measures as might be deemed expedient for promoting these improvements. By an act of June 19, 1812, they were empowered to purchase the rights, interests and estate of the Western Inland Lock Navigation Company.[1]

On the 17th of April, 1816, commissioners were appoined to construct a canal from the Hudson river to Lake Erie and Lake Champlain. The first commissioners were named in the act, and vacancies were to be filled by the Legislature in the same manner as senators in congress are appointed. By an act of May 6, 1844, their numbers were reduced to four (the office of the two not acting being abolished), and they were made elective, on a term of four years. By the constitution of 1846, three canal commissioners are elected, on a term of three years, and they have been so classified, that one is elected every year. They receive a salary of $1,700 each.

[1] By an act of March 30, 1792, Samuel Jones, David Gelston, Comfort Sands, Malancton Smith and Nicholas Hoffman, in New-York, and Abraham Ten Broeck, John Tayler, Philip S. Van Rensselaer, Cornelius Glen and John Ten Broeck, in Albany, were appointed commissioners for taking subscriptions and issuing stock in the Western and Northern Inland Navigation Companies.

Under authority conferred by the act of April 15, 1817, the Supreme Court appointed Richard Varick, Nathaniel W. Howell, William W. Woolsey, Obadiah German and Elisha Jenkins, to appraise the property of the former company. The amount paid was $152,718.52 (History of the N. Y. Canals, ii., 40,)

The canal fund was created April 15, 1817, and the lieutenant-governor, comptroller, attorney-general, surveyor-general, secretary of state and treasurer, were made commissioners for its management. The canal board was created April 18, 1826, consisting of the canal commissioners and the commissioners of the canal fund, to which the state engineer and surveyor is now added.

An act passed February 9, 1821, authorized the appointment, by concurrent resolution of the Legislature, of three canal appraisers on the Champlain canal, three on the western and three on the eastern sections of the Erie canal. A section, in an act of April 20, 1825, directed the appointment, by the governor and senate, of two freeholders, who, being associated with any one of the acting canal commissioners, should be appraisers.

By an act passed May 10, 1836, three canal appraisers, with a term of two years, were directed to be appointed by the governor and senate, who were to receive a per diem allowance of $4 for the time employed, and five cents per mile as mileage.

An act passed March 11, 1833, directed the appointment of a second deputy comptroller, to perform any of the duties of the comptroller in relation to the canals, except as a commissioner of the canal fund; this office was continued until May 13, 1840, when it was abolished, and the commissioners of the canal fund were directed to appoint a chief clerk, who should be a clerk of the canal board and perform all the duties of the former officer.

The office of auditor of the canal department was created by an act of April 3, 1848, which abolished the office of chief clerk of the canal department. The duties of the latter, together with all the powers of the comptroller in relation to the canals (except as a commissioner of the canal fund), were vested in the auditor, who was also made secretary of the commissioners of the canal fund and of the canal board. He has a seal of office,[1] issues warrants for payments out of the canal fund, and submits annually to its commissioners a statement of the receipts and payments on account of the canals and the canal debt; he instructs disbursing and collecting agents, and has the general direction of affairs relating to the finances of the canals. His salary is $2,500 per annum. He is appointed by the commissioners of the canal fund for a term of two years.

Superintendents of repairs, collectors of tolls, division engineers (not exceeding three), resident engineers (not exceeding twelve), and as many first assistant engineers as the public interests require

STATE PRISON INSPECTORS.

An act of March 26, 1796, providing for the erection of two state prisons, directed the appointment by the governor and council of a keeper[1] (of some mechanical profession), and a board of inspectors, not exceeding seven to each. The latter, besides a stated visitation, were charged with the duty of purchasing clothing, bedding, raw materials for manufacture, &c., and were to keep an account of the expenses and earnings of each prisoner, who might receive the surplus product of his labor when discharged.[2]

John Watts, Mathew Clarkson, Isaac Stoutenburgh, Thomas Eddy and John Murray, were named commissioners for building a state prison in New-York, and Philip Schuyler, Abraham Ten Broeck, David Hale, Jeremiah Van Rensselaer and Tunis T' Van Veghten, for building one in Albany.[3]

The New-York prison (known as Newgate) was opened for inmates November 25, 1797, but was found, after a few years' trial, to be inadequate to attain the great end of justice—the reform of offenders—from its limited accommodations and the crowded state of its apartments.

On the 12th of April, 1816, a law was passed for the building of a state prison at Auburn; and Elijah Miller, James Glover and John H. Beach, were appointed commissioners for that purpose.

On the 7th of March, 1825, George Tibbits, Stephen Allen and Samuel M. Hopkins, were appointed commissioners to erect, at some suitable place in the first or second senatorial district, another prison on the plan of that at Auburn, and to sell the old one in New-York towards defraying the expenses of the new one. A site was selected at Sing Sing, with reference to the employment of convicts in the working of marble, an extensive quarry of which occurs on the premises.

[1] By an act of March 30, 1798, keepers were to be appointed by the inspectors.
[2] Greenleaf's edition of Laws, iii., 295; folio edition of Laws, 19th session, page 20.
[3] The powers of the latter were suspended February 3, 1797 (Gr.. iii., 354), and those of the former transferred to the inspectors, February 15, 1799. (Andrew's edition Laws, page 577.)

The pursuit of mechanical employments in prisons, being alleged by artizans to exert an influence prejudicial to their interests, led to the passage of a law, May 1, 1844, directing the appointment, by the governor and senate, of an agent to erect a prison in Clinton county, to be located with reference to the working of iron mines and the manufacture of that metal. Ransom Cook of Saratoga Springs was appointed to this trust,[1] under whose direction the present Clinton prison, in the town of Beekmantown, was erected.

Female convicts are sent to Sing Sing only. With reference to the sending of male prisoners, the state is divided into three districts. The first and second judicial districts send to Sing Sing; the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth to Auburn, and the others to Clinton. In the third and fourth judicial districts, it is in the discretion of the court to send to Auburn or Sing Sing, except such counties in the fourth district as may be designated by the inspectors.

By an act of April 2, 1819, five inspectors were to be appointed to Auburn prison by the governor and council of appointment.[2] Upon the completion of the Sing Sing prison, three inspectors were directed to be appointed in like manner. The governor, attorney-general and comptroller were directed to appoint three inspectors to the Clinton prison.

These inspectors were continued until the office of state prison inspectors was created by the constitution of 1846.[3] There are three state prison inspectors, who are elected for three years, and have the supervision of the several prisons, the appointment of keepers and other officers, and the entire regulation of their affairs. They are required, jointly, to visit all the prisons at least four times a year; and at the beginning of every quarter a prison is assigned to each, over which he has the more immediate charge, and at which he must attend at least one week in each month. The inspectors report annually to the Legislature, and receive a salary of $1,600 each. They have been so classified that one is elected annually.[4]

BOARD OF RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS.[3]

A board of railroad commissioners was formed in 1855,[1] consisting of the state engineer and surveyor for the time being, one person elected annually by the stock and bond holders of the railroad corporations of the state, and one appointed by senate on the nomination of the governor, with a term of three years. This board hap a general supervision of the railroads of the state, and reported their statistics annually to the Legislature.

Each commissioner, except the state engineer and surveyor, received a salary of $2,500, and actual expenses not exceeding $500 annually; and the expenses of the department were paid by a tax on railroads in proportion to their gross receipts.

Railroad Commissioners.

Silas Seymour (state engineer and surveyor), ex-officio, president.
William J. McAlpine (on the part of railroad bond and stock holders).[2]
James B. Swain (appointed by governor and senate, April 4, 1855), ex-officio, secretary.

[1] April 14, see chapter 526, Laws of 1855.
[2] Named in act in the first instance, and subsequently elected as above.
[3] This board was abolished April 16, 1857, and its duties restored to the state engineer and surveyor, who was empowerd to appoint a deputy, in charge of railroad statistics, at a salary of $2,000.

REPRESENTATIVE OFFICERS.

The convention that met at Albany, in June, 1754, to discuss a plan of union, may be considered as the earliest attempt at a consolidation of strength in the American colonies, and was regarded with jealousy by the mother country, as tending to independence.[1] The first congress of the American colonies that met to oppose the assumptions of the British parliament, assembled in New-York, October 7, 1765, at which this colony was represented by Robert R. Livingston, Philip Livingston, Leonard Lispenard, John Cuyler and William Bayard. At this early period, the ultimate object professed was simply a repeal of certain obnoxious laws, in which they failed, and the causes of irritation continuing to increase, the colonies became clamorous for redress; primary meetings were held in every quarter; a continental congress was called at Philadelphia,[2] in 1774; in the spring following, another, and the public agitation rapidly tended towards the crisis which resulted in independence.

A Provincial Convention assembled at the Exchange, in New-York, April 20, 1775, in pursuance of a call from the committee of the city and county of New-York, for the purpose of choosing delegates to represent the colony in continental congress. It was dissolved April 22d. The votes were given by counties, in which New-York had four, Albany three, and each of the other counties two voices.

President—PHILIP LIVINGSTON.
Secretary—John McKesson.

Albany—Peter R. Livingston, Walter Livingston,[3] Col. Philip Schuyler, Col. Abraham Ten Broeck, Abraham Yates.

Ulster—George Clinton, Charles De Witt, Levi Pawling.

Westchester—Samuel Drake, Robert Graham, James Holmes, Col. Lewis Morris, Jonathan Platt, John Thomas, Jr., Major Philip Van Cortlandt, Stephen Ward.

To avoid repetition, the names of representatives in the several provincial congresses, and in the state convention that formed the first constitution, will be given in a general alphabetical table, with references denoting the particular convention or body to which each person was chosen. These delegates were paid by the counties they represented.

The short intervals at which they were elected indicate the extreme watchfulness bestowed at that period upon the exercise of delegated power. The references used are as follows:

1. Deputies to First New-York Provincial Congress, convened at New-York city, May 23, 1775, adjourned November 4th, 1775:

President—PETER VAN BRUGH LIVINGSTON, of New-York.

From December 5, 1776, to Dec. 6, 1776.
From December 6, 1776, to March 6, 1777

President (from July 9 to August 10)—Brigadier-General NATHANIEL WOODHULL, of Suffolk.[1]

President (from August 10 to September 21)—ABRAHAM YATES, Jr., of Albany.

President (from September 26 to October 15)—Col. PETER R. LIVINGSTON, of Albany.

President (from March 6 to end) Brigadier-General ABRAHAM TEN BROECK, of Albany.

Col. PIERRE VAN CORTLANDT, Vice-President, and others, occasionally presiding.

Chaplain—Rev. Mr. Lewis.

In no instance was the whole delegation present, numbers being absent on public or private business. Each county, in its returns of elections, generally designated the number that might act as a quorum. Votes in congress and convention were taken by counties, the number allowed to each being as follows:

County.	1st and 2d Congress.	3d Congress & Convent'n.	County.	1st and 2d Congress.	3d Congress & Convent'n
Albany,	3	6	Orange,	2	3
Charlotte,	2	2	Queens,	2	4
Cumberland,	2	2	Richmond,	2	2
Dutchess,	2	5	Suffolk,	2	4
Gloucester,	1		Tryon,	2	3
Kings,	2	2	Ulster,	2	4
New-York,	4	8	Westchester,	2	4

The title of "Provincial Congress of the Colony of New-York," was changed to "Convention of Representatives of the State of New-York," July 10, 1776; and August 1, the following committee was appointed to prepare and report a constitution, viz:

Col. John Broome,
Col. Charles De Witt,
William Duer,
John Sloss Hobart,
John Jay,
Robert R. Livingston,
Gouverneur Morris,
Gen. John Morin Scott,
William Smith,
Samuel Townsend,
Henry Wisner,
Abraham Yates,
Robert Yates.

Their report was made March 12, 1777, and discussed till April 20, 1777, when the first constitution of New-York was adopted.

[1] Gen. Woodhull was brutally wounded after his surrender, soon after the battle at Brooklyn, and died of his wounds at Jamaica, September 20, 1776.

Convention of 1801.

This convention was convened, by an act passed April 6, to consider the expediency of altering the constitution respecting the number of senators and members of assembly, with power to reduce and limit the same, and to determine the relative powers of the governor and council of appointment in originating nominations for office.

It fixed the number of the senate, permanently, at 32; the assembly was fixed at 100, to be increased after each census at the rate of two yearly till it equaled 150. The several members of the council of appointment were declared to have equal powers of nominating with the governor.

This convention began at Albany, October 13, and ended October 27, 1801.

CONGRESS UNDER THE CONSTITUTION.

The revolution had no sooner subsided, and the tumults of war given place to the pursuits of peace, than sensible men began to perceive that the Union, under the articles of confederation, could not long exist amidst the conflicting sectional and local interests that arose among the independent states.

A consolidated central government, with full powers to manage its foreign relations and regulate its common interests, was found wanting, to give unity and strength to its action and permanence to its existence.

Commissioners were accordingly appointed by the Legislature, May 6, 1786, to represent the state at a convention to take into consideration the trade and commerce of the United States, to consider how far an uniform system in their commercial intercourse might be necessary to their common interest and permanent harmony, and to report to the several states such an act as, when unanimously ratified, would enable congress to provide for the same. This commission consisted of Egbert Benson, James Duane,

Leonard Gansevoort, Alexander Hamilton, Robert C. Livingston and Robert R. Livingston.

The convention was held at Annapolis, September 11–14, 1786, at which Messrs. Benson and Hamilton attended, and which strongly recommended a general convention to be held in May following to devise a more efficient union of the states and more ample powers to congress.

In pursuance of this advice, the Legislature, on the 6th of March, 1787, appointed Alexander Hamilton, John Lansing, Jr., and Robert Yates, to represent the state in a convention, at Philadelphia, for the purpose of revising the articles of confederation, and recommending such alterations as would render the federal constitution adequate to the exigencies of government and the preservation of the Union.

The convention met on the second Monday in May, and on the 17th of September, 1787, reported the present constitution of the United States. Hamilton was the only delegate from New-York that signed this instrument.

New-York Senators in Congress.

The constitution of the United States provides that two senators shall be chosen by the Legislature of each state, who shall hold their office six years. At their first session, they were to be divided into three classes, so that one-third might be chosen every second year; and vacancies, that might occur in the recess of the Legislature of any state, are to be filled by the executive thereof until the next meeting of the Legislature, which shall fill such vacancies.

A senator must have attained the age of thirty-five, and have been nine years a citizen of the United States, and must be an inhabitant of the state from which he is chosen. This state was not represented in the first session of the first congress.

Territories are each represented by one delegate elected by the people, who has a seat in the house of representatives, with power to speak but not to vote.

Representatives in congress must have attained the age of twenty-five, and been seven years citizens of the United States. When elected, they must reside in the state in which they are chosen.

Congress meets annually on the first Monday in December, and at other times when required by proclamation of the president. Members are elected on even years, and take their seats on the year following their election. Their terms expire on the third day of March of every alternate year.

Congressional Districts.

The state is divided by the Legislature, as soon as practicable after each federal census,[1] into congressional districts, for the election of representatives in congress. The following is a synopsis of these divisions from their origin:

Representatives in Congress.[2]

Alphabetical List.

The residences of members of congress have not been made a subject of record; and, in the absence of official data, momoranda incidentally made in the secretary's office, information derived from the journals of the day, from biographical sketches and from personal recollections, have been substituted in the following table. As the period embraced extends over two-thirds of a century, errors may have occurred in the preparation of this column. The author will feel greatly indebted for any corrections that may be suggested. When not elected for a full term, or when the office became vacant from any cause, a star is placed before the number denoting the congress, and the reason may be learned by referring back to the notes in the list of members "By Congresses."

NEW-YORK LEGISLATURE.

Under the colonial government, the legislative power was vested in the governor and council, and in the general assembly. The council, when full, consisted of twelve members, who were appointed by the king, enjoyed the same authority as the lords in parliament, and, with the governor, had an unqualified veto upon the acts of the general assembly. They acted as a privy council to the governor in matters of civil government, and held their office at the will of the crown. Privy councils were held at the fort in New-York, at which the governor was always present, but their legislative sessions were held without his presence, at the city hall.[1] The senior member was speaker of their house; their proceedings were not published,[2] and in their formalities they closely imitated the English house of lords. Messages to the assembly were carried by one of their members, and the house always arose at his entrance and received him standing. Councillors received no salary; and towards the close of the colonial period, their duties had devolved upon a few, and were very great. The idea of a senate, in our legislative system, was probably derived from this body, which, in its forms and customs at an early period, it much resembled. The council exercised judicial authority upon writs of error and appeal.

The general assembly was organized in 1683, and at a later period consisted of twenty-seven members, elected viva voce by the people once in seven years,[3] and by the districts they represented. The tenure of their office was formerly at the will of the governor, and new elections were ordered so often as it suited his caprice or interests. In 1734 a law was passed limiting their term to three years, but this was annulled by the king. The septennial act was passed in 1743, and remained in force till the revolution. The general assembly elected from their number a speaker, chose their own clerk, and published their journal. Strangers were not allowed to be present at their sessions. They possessed the sole right of originating all laws granting appropriations of money, and, in the political struggles which began in Cosby's administration, they exercised this right by withholding the compensation of the governor, to induce a compliance with their measures. The acrimony of these quarrels had considerably subsided before the revolution; but they doubtless had an influence beneficial to liberty, by introducing political discussions, and imparting a knowlege of the tendencies of irresponsible power. This body continued its sittings until May, 1775; and among the last of its acts was the adoption of petitions to the king and parliament, in which, while they professed a warm attachment to the royal person and government, they solemnly protested against the aggressions that had for years been gaining upon the rights of the people, and expressed, quite as strongly as was then avowed by the patriots of the day, the sentiments advocated in the revolution.

[3] Until March 27, 1778, elections were held by poll, at one place in each county designated by law, before the sheriff and inspectors nominated by each candidate. Electors of representatives in the general assembly were required to be resident citizens, possessing a freehold worth £40, owned at least three months before the date of the writ of summons. Popish recusants were prohibited from voting.

The acts of the colonial Legislature required the approbation of the king, in privy council, to become valid; and the latter possessed an absolute veto power, which was, however, but seldom exercised. The act of approbation was engrossed upon parchment, under the privy seal of the realm, and transmitted to the governor. An imperfect series of these is preserved in the state library and secretary's office.

The state Legislature has always been composed of two branches; the senate, of fewer members, elected from large districts and for a longer term, and the assembly, of a larger number, chosen annually from the people, and supposed to represent their immediate local interests.

Bills may originate in either house,[1] and must be passed by both and be approved by the governor, or, if he objects, by two-thirds of the members present in both houses.[2]

Until 1822, there existed a council of revision, consisting of the governor, chancellor, and judges of the supreme court, or any two of them with the governor, who must approve of every bill before it could become a law, unless passed by a two-third vote of both houses notwithstanding their objection. This feature of the constitution of 1777 is said to have been introduced by Chancellor Livingston.[3] The council sat with closed doors, and the same formalities were observed in transmitting messages and recording their proceedings as in the Legislature. Their minutes were not published.[4]

[1] An attempt was made soon after the organization of the government, on the part of the assembly, to continue the usage of the colonial assembly in relation to pecuniary appropriations. On the 26th of October, 1778, the senate claimed an equal power of originating money bills, and on the 4th of November the assembly passed a formal resolution, asserting their sole right to this privilege, as had been the custom formerly. The discussion was not continued, and the claims of the senate were admitted.

[4] The minutes of the council of revision, in the secretary's office, occupy five volumes.

During their continuance, this council rejected 169 bills, 51 of which were passed notwithstanding their objections, among which was the law for holding the convention of 1821. Upon revising the constitution, the veto power was vested in the governor, to the same extent as is enjoyed by the president of the United States upon the acts of congress.

Each branch of the Legislature makes its own rules, and judges the qualifications of its own members. Their sessions are open, except when the public welfare requires secrecy, and their journals are published.

The senate originally consisted of twenty-four members, and might increase one with every twenty-fourth part of the whole number of voters, as shown by a census to be taken once in seven years, until the number equaled one hundred. The census of 1795 made their number forty-three; but the rule being found unequal in its operation, the constitution was amended in 1801, by reducing their number to thirty-two, which has since been retained, and is so fixed by the constitution.

The state was, by the constitution of 1777, divided into four great senatorial districts, by that of 1821 into eight, and by that of 1846 into thirty-two districts. Until 1846, senators held their office four years, one-fourth part of the whole number being chosen annually. By the present constitution, the whole number are elected every second year. The lieutenant-governor is, by virtue of his office, the president of the senate; but in case of a vacancy in that office, the senate elect a president from their number.

By the constitution of 1821, the offices of chancellor, vice-chancellors, judges of county courts, surrogates, masters and examiners in chancery, notaries public, supreme court commissioners, loan commissioners, inspectors and measurers for commercial purposes, recorders and marshals of cities, commissioners of deeds in this state, superintendent of salt springs, harbor masters, port wardens and pilots, directors in certain banks, inspectors and clerks of prisons, Indian agents, &c., inspectors of turnpikes, canal appraisers, and several local and minor offices,[1] were filled by the governor, with the advice and consent of the senate. Major-generals, brigade inspectors and chiefs of the staff departments, except adjutant-general (appointed by the governor) and commissary-general, were also appointed by the governor and senate. All other military officers were chosen by the written votes of those over whom they commanded, except the staff officers of the several divisions, brigades, regiments and battalions. The whole number of offices dependent upon this appointing power, in 1846, amounted to 2,238. These were then very considerably reduced, and are now limited to superintendent of bank department, a railroad commissioner, major-generals of the militia, notaries public, loan commissioners, trustees of the seamen's fund and retreat, of the asylums for idiots and the insane, pilots, port wardens, and harbor masters of New-York, physicians of the marine hospital, and commissioners of emigration, and a few other minor offices.

When deliberating upon appointments to office, the senate is said to be in executive session, and they usually on such occasions sit with closed doors; their votes and debates are not preserved, and their proceedings are recorded separately, in volumes kept by their clerk. Executive sessions of the senate have been repeatedly convened at times when the Legislature was not in session, and when important offices were reqnired to be filled.

The assembly is elected annually, and consisted at first of seventy members, which number might increase one with every seventieth part of voters until it contained three hundred members. In 1801 the number had amounted to one hundred and eight, when the constitution was amended, reducing their number to one hundred, and providing that after each septennial census they should increase at the rate of two annually, until the number equaled one hundred and fifty. This increase was twelve in 1808, and fourteen in 1815; but the constitution of 1821 fixed the number permanently at one hundred and twenty-eight, and introduced the decennial census, from which the apportionment among the several counties should be from time to time equalized.

The assembly, at the opening of each session, elect one of their number speaker, who presides over their deliberations and may vote with the other members. The speaker is, ex-officio, a commissioner of the land office, and a trustee of the capitol and of the new state hall. He receives $4 for each day's attendance in the discharge of his official duties.

Until 1822, the assembly appointed annually one senator from each great senatorial district to the council of appointment. From that period to 1846, they possessed concurrent power with the senate in the appointment of secretary of state, comptroller, treasurer, attorney-general, surveyor-general and commissary-general. From 1816 to 1844, canal commissioners; since 1787, regents of the university; from 1777 to 1789, delegates in congress; and since 1854, the superintendent of public instruction has been appointed in like manner.

Council of Appointment.

Under the first constitution of the state, the assembly, once in every year, openly nominated and appointed one of the senators from each of the four districts, who formed, with the governor presiding, a council of appointment. The governor had a casting vote only, and, till 1801, alone possessed the power of originating nominations. The constitutional amendment of that year gave a concurrent power of nomination to the several members. A senator could not be chosen to this office two successive years. The patronage of this council was immense, including all military, civil and judicial officers not specially excepted by the constitution. In 1821, 8,287 miltary, and 6,663 civil officers held their commissions from the council of appointment, and most of them were liable to removal at will. This office had become very unpopular, and, in revising the constitution, it was abolished without a dissenting vote either in the committee or the convention.

Some difficulties occurred in settling upon the term of office in certain cases, but it finally became established that members of the council should hold for a full year from the date of their appointment, even when their duties as senators had expired within the year.[1]

It will be remembered that this state was among the first to adopt a written constitution, and the framers of this instrument had no other precedents but the example of the ancient republics, whose weakness consisted in the abuse of power by the multitude, who were too liable to be influenced by intriguing demagogues in pursuit of personal aggrandizement.

The journals of the council of appointment fill fourteen MS. volumes in the secretary's office. After 1798, civil and military appointments were entered in separate volumes.

At an early day the council, while it disclaimed the exercise of a judicial authority, felt bound to entertain charges against persons holding office under them, in the presence of the accused, with the view of proving the truth or error of the accusations; but at a later day their proceedings were summary, and their power was often used to promote political measures.

[1] Vacated by expulsion from senate, March 15, 1781.
[2] In place of Paine.

The first law in relation to elections, passed by the state Legislature,[1] introduced the practice of voting by ballot for governor and lieutenant-governor, but retained the colonial practice of voting viva voce for senators and members of assembly.[2] It directed elections to be held in every borough, town, district, precinct and ward, by inspectors chosen for that purpose.

By an act of February 13, 1787, the mode of voting by ballot for senators and assemblymen was introduced, and this mode has ever since been continued. The boxes containing the ballots for governor, lieutenant-governor and senators were at first returned by the sheriffs to the secretary of state, to be canvassed by a joint committee of the Legislature; and on the 27th of March, 1799, the system of inspection and canvassing by the local boards was adopted. The results were to be recorded by the town clerk, returned to the county clerks for record, and by them to the secretary of state, to be also by him recorded. They were to be canvassed by the secretary, comptroller and treasurer, on or before the eighth day of June, and the results published. A board of county canvassers, consisting of one inspector of elections from each town, was instituted by an act of April 17, 1822, which also added the surveyor-general and attorney-general to the board of state canvassers. Until 1842, each town and ward formed one election district; and the polls were opened, by adjournment from place to place, on three successive days.[3] By an act of April 5, 1842, they were directed to be held in one day; the common council of cities, and the supervisors, assessors and clerks of towns were required, if the population exceeded five hundred, and allowed, if

[2] The ballot box was unknown at the colonial elections; and it is interesting to observe the extreme caution and jealousy with which our present system of voting by secret ballot was adopted, and how tremblingly our rulers ventured upon the experiment which has become a characteristic feature of our elections. In the Constitution of 1777, we find the following preamble and ordinance:

"VI. And whereas an opinion hath long prevailed among diverse of the the good people of this state that voting at elections, by ballot, would tend more to preserve the liberty and equal freedom of the people than voting viva voce. To this end, therefore, that a fair experiment be made which of those two modes of voting is to be preferred:

"Be it ordained that, as soon as may be after the termination of the present war between the United States of America and Great Britain, an act or acts be passed by the Legislature of this state for causing all elections thereafter to be held in this state, for senators and representatives in assembly, to be by ballot, and directing the manner in which the same shall be conducted. And whereas it is possible that, after all the care of the Legislature in framing the said act or acts, certain inconveniences and mischiefs, unforeseen at this day, may be found to attend the said mode of electing by ballot:

"It is further ordained that if, after a full and fair experiment shall be made of voting by ballot aforesaid, the same shall be found less conducive to the safety or interest of the state than the method of voting viva voce, it shall be lawful and constitutional for the Legislature to abolish the same, provided two-thirds of the members present in each house respectively shall concur therein. And further, that during the continuance of the present war, and until the Legislature of this state shall provide for the election of senators and representatives in assembly by ballot, the said elections shall be made viva voce."

[3] From 1787 to 1822, elections might be held five days.

less, to divide their town into a convenient number of election districts, in each of which independent elections were to be held.

By the act of 1787, general elections were held on the last Tuesday of April; by that of 1822, on the first Monday of November; and by that of 1842 (now in force), on the Tuesday after first Monday of November.

Electors of governor, lieutenant-governor and senators, besides being actual residents, were required, under the first constitution, to possess a freehold of the value of £100,[1] within the district, above all debts charged thereon. Electors of members of assembly were required to possess a freehold of the value of £20,[1] or to have rented a tenement of the value of forty shillings,[1] within the district.[2]

Blacks and mulattoes were required to produce authenticated certificates of freedom,[3] but in other respects they enjoyed the same rights as whites.

By the constitutions of 1822 and 1846, property qualifications are not required, except that persons of color cannot vote unless they have been three years an inhabitant of the state, and for the last year, of the district, and shall own a freehold worth $250, clear of incumbrance, upon which they have paid tax. Unless so entitled to vote, they are not subject to direct taxation.[4]

The qualifications of a voter are defined by the constitution. Conviction of a felony disqualifies a person from voting, unless restored by a pardon that shall contain a clause expressly restoring its subject to the rights of a citizen.[5]

On several occasions, questions have been submitted by the Legislature to the people at a general election. The votes relating to the constitution have been given on pages 57 and 58. On other subjects they have been as follows:

1825 — On the election of presidential electors:

"By districts,"	66,324
"By general ticket, plurality,"	56,801
"By general ticket, majority,"	941

[1] These were changed, April 9, 1811, to corresponding sums in the federal currency viz., $250, $50 and $5.

[2] By the act of 1813, persons who were freemen of the city of New-York, October 14, 1775, or of Albany, April 20, 1777, were allowed to vote for assemblymen without the property qualification.

[3] Acts of April 9, 1811, March 29, 1813, and April 11, 1815.

[4] Constitutions of 1822 and 1846, article 2, section 1. The convention of 1846 submitted the question of equal suffrage for colored persons to the people, for their decision. The result was as follows:

"Equal suffrage to colored persons — Yes,"	85,396
"Equal suffrage to colored persons — No,"	223,834

[5] For the law relating to elections, and prescribing the rights and duties relating thereto, see Revised Statutes, part 1, chapter 6.

1826 — On the election of justices and extension of franchise:

"Against electing justices of the peace,"	1,663
"For extending the elective franchise,"	127,077
"Against extending the elective franchise,"	3,215

1833 — On reducing salt duties, and on the election of the mayor of the city of New-York by the electors thereof:

"For authorizing the Legislature to reduce duties on salt,"	93,260
"Against authorizing the Legislature to reduce duties on salt,"	7,865
"For electing mayor of New-York by the electors thereof,"	48,977
"Against electing mayor of New-York by electors thereof,"	1,936

1835 — On restoring duties on salt and on goods sold at auction to the general fund:

"For restoring duties to the general fund,"	68,126
"Against restoring duties to the general fund,"	8,675

1839 — On the election of mayors by the people:

"For the election of mayors by the people,"	90,473
"Against the election of mayors by the people,"	382

1845 — On amending the constitution in relation to the removal of judicial officers, and the property qualification for office:

"For amendment in relation to removal of judicial officers,"	114,769
"Against amendment in relation to removal of judicial officers,"	3,689
"For amendment for abrogation of property qualification for office,"	114,900
"Against amendment for abrogation of property qualification for office,"	3,901

May 5, 1846 — The excise vote, except the city of New-York:

For "License,"	111,884
For "No License,"	177,683

1849 — On the adoption of the free school law:

"For the new school law,"	249,872
"Against the new school law,"	91,951

1850 — On the repeal of the new school law:

"For the repeal of the new school law,"	184,208
"Against the repeal of the new school law,"	209,347

February 15, 1854 — On amending the constitution, to provide for the more speedy completion of the canals:

"For amending the constitution,"	185,771
"Against amending the constitution,"	60,526

[1] No journals or records of names of members of general assembly, between 1683 and 1691, are preserved. The duration of office of members, previous to 1743, was unlimited, and dependent upon the will of the governor; and this power of convening, proroguing and dissolving the assembly was frequently exercised to procure a compliance with the wishes of the executive. The following is a list of dates on which new general assemblies were convened, with the speakers chosen for each.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS.

The federal constitution directs[1] that each state shall choose a number of electors for president and vice-president, equal to their number of senators and representatives in Congress, who shall assemble in their respective states and ballot for president and vice-president. Congress has directed[2] electors to be appointed within thirty-four days of the first Wednesday of December, and fixed their time of meeting on the first Wednesday of December, of every fourth year, commencing with 1792.[3] The State of New-York, as well as Rhode Island and North Carolina, not having ratified the constitution at that time, chose no electors at the first presidential election. Two votes of Maryland and two of Virginia were not given. The New-York Legislature, in 1792, enacted[4] that the electors should be chosen in the same manner as delegates in Congress (by joint ballot of the two houses), and that a session should be held for that purpose on the first Tuesday of November. The electors were to meet as an Electoral College at Poughkeepsie. Three electors were to be chosen from each senatorial district, except the southern, which was entitled to four. By a subsequent law,[5] a meeting of the Legislature was fixed on the first Tuesday of November, every fourth year, for choosing electors, who were to assemble at Hudson. This law continued till 1812,[6] when the quadrennial sessions of the electors were fixed at the Capitol in Albany, where they are now held.

Soon after the adoption of the late constitution, the question of changing the mode of choosing electors was submitted to the people,[7] with the results given on page 103.

An act was accordingly passed[8] for the election of electors by single districts, in the same manner as representatives in Congress; and the electors, when assembled, were empowered to choose two persons to represent the state at large, and to fill any vacancies that might occur in their number. This law was embodied in the revision of the laws of 1827. In 1829,[9] the mode was changed to election by general ticket, and this has been since continued.

REGENTS OF THE UNIVERSITY.

King's College, in New-York city, was incorporated by patent, October 31st, 1754, and received at various times the aid of a lottery, a township of land in Vermont, and other grants from government, by the aid of which it had erected buildings and gone into successful operation, but the revolution broke up its organization, and its premises were used as a hospital during the war.

Early in 1784, committees upon seminaries of learning were appointed in the Legislature, and on 1st of May a law was passed granting new powers to the college, whose name was changed to Columbia College. The principal state officers, two persons in each county, and one person chosen by each religious denomination in the state, were made trustees; who had power to establish and regulate the college, locate branches in other places, and direct the educational interests of the state generally. These trustees were designated Regents of the University,[1] and were to choose a chancellor, vice-chancellor, treasurer and secretary. Vacancies (excepting those of the religious sects) were to be filled by the governor and council of appointment.

The regents, being widely scattered, were found unable to assemble in sufficient numbers for a quorum, and at the next session[2] thirty-three additional ones were appointed, of whom twenty resided in New-York city.

A short experience proved the inadequacy of this law to meet the purposes for which it was passed; and in 1787, another plan of supervision over the higher literary institutions of the state, which was adopted, has been continued with little change to the present time.[3] By the act of April 13th, of that year, nineteen persons therein named, with the governor and lieutenant-governor by virtue of their offices, were constituted regents of the university, and required to visit and inspect all colleges, academies and schools, examine into the state and system of education, and report annually to the Legislature. They were empowered, in case of vacancy, to appoint presidents of colleges and principals of academies, for one year, to confer degrees and to incorporate colleges and academies, provided that the annual revenue of any such academy should not exceed the value of four thousand bushels of wheat.

[3] The authorship of this system has generally been ascribed to Alexander Hamilton, then in the Assembly. An examination of the legislative journals and of the original drafts of the act still preserved, will show that Ezra L'Hommedieu, then in the Senate, was prominently concerned in its passage.

Vacancies in corporations of trustees were to be filled by the remaining trustees, and no president or professor was ineligible on account of any religious tenets he might profess.

In 1842 the secretary of state,[1] and in 1854 the superintendent of public instruction,[2] were made regents of the university. In 1844 the regents were made trustees of the state library,[3] and, in conjunction with the superintendent of schools, were charged with the supervision of the Normal School.

In 1845, they were made trustees of the cabinet of natural history,[4] and in 1856 the supervision of the completion of the Colonial History and subjects of a kindred class were committed to their care. They hold annual meetings on the second Thursday of January, and such other meetings as the chancellor may appoint.[5]

Regents are appointed by joint ballot of the Legislature. They receive no salaries, and hold until their places are vacated by death, resignation, removal from the state, or neglecting to attend at least one meeting in each year. They may be removed by concurrent resolution of the Legislature, but this power has never been exercised.

GEOLOGICAL SURVEY.

In 1835, the secretary of state was directed by the Legislature to report at its next session a plan for a geological survey of the state. In this report, it was recommended to divide the state into four districts, and to appoint two geologists to each, a draftsman, a zoölogist and a botanist. An act was passed April 15, 1836, authorizing a survey, and the proposed plan was changed to the appointment of a mineralogist for the whole state, and a geologist and an assistant for each district. These appointments were made by the governor, excepting those of assistant geologists, who, after the first, were appointed by their principals. The state was originally divided into four districts, as follows:

First District.—Albany, Columbia, Delaware, Dutchess, Greene, Kings, New-York, Orange, Putnam, Queens, Rensselaer, Richmond, Rockland, Saratoga, Schenectady, Schoharie, Suffolk, Sullivan, Ulster, Washington and Westchester counties.

Second District.—Clinton, Essex, Franklin, Hamilton, St. Lawrence and Warren counties.

Third District.—Cayuga, Genesee, Herkimer, Jefferson,[1] Lewis, Livingston, Madison, Monroe, Montgomery, Oneida, Onondaga, Ontario, Orleans and Wayne counties.

Fourth District.—Allegany, Broome, Cattaraugus, Chautauque, Chenango, Cortland, Erie, Niagara, Otsego, Seneca, Steuben, Tioga, Tompkins and Yates counties.

At the end of the first season (autumn of 1836), a reorganization of the third and fourth districts was recommended by the geologists, and made by the governor, by which Cayuga lake, and a line drawn north and south from its extremities, became the west boundary of the third and east boundary of the fourth district. Tompkins county was divided by this line. An exchange was soon after made between the geologists first appointed to the third and fourth districts, and a palæontological department was recommended. To this, Mr. Conrad, the geologist of the fourth district, was chosen April 1, 1837, and Mr. James Hall was appointed to fill the place thus made vacant. The following persons were commissioned in this survey:

Zoölogical Department:

James E. De Kay, of Oyster Bay, N. Y., Zoologist, ... June 2, 1836.
John W. Hill, of Nyack, N. Y., Draftsman, ... June, 1836.

Botanical Department:

John Torrey, of Princeton, N. J., Botanist, ... July 1, 1836.

---

[1] Previous to the reorganization, in 1837, Mr. Conrad of the 3d Dist. consented to allow Jefferson co., which originally was included in his district, to be included in the 2d.

MINERALOGICAL DEPARTMENT:[1]

Lewis C. Beck, of New Brunswick, N. J., Mineralogist, June 2, 1836.

GEOLOGICAL DEPARTMENT:

1*st Dist.*	William W. Mather, of Albany, Geologist, ..	July,	1836.
	Caleb Briggs,[2] of Troy, Assistant Geologist, .	July,	1836.
2*d Dist.*	Ebenezer Emmons, of Williamstown, Mass., Geologist, ...	June 2,	1836.

	Jas. Eights,[5] of Albany, Assistant Geologist,	Aug.,	1836.
4*th Dist.*	Lardner Vanuxem,[6] Bristol, Pa., Geologist, .	July,	1836.
	J. W. Boyd,[7] New-York, Assistant Geologist,	July,	1836.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT:[8]

Ebenezer Emmons, of Albany.

PALÆONTOLOGICAL DEPARTMENT:

Timothy A. Conrad,[9] of Philadelphia, Pa., ... April 1, 1837.
James Hall, of Albany, ... June 1843.

The labors of the above named persons have terminated with publication of their final reports, excepting in the Palæontological department, which is still continued. The publications of this survey (besides the five annual reports, from 1837 to 1841, printed with the legislative documents) are in quarto, and as follows:

COURTS.

Under the English colonial government, the courts consisted of a Court of Appeals, composed of the governor and council, the Supreme Court, Court of Chancery, Court of Admiralty, Prerogative Court, Court of Common Pleas, Court of Sessions and Justices' Courts.

The governor and council were instructed by the crown to hear and determine appeals from any of the courts of common law, if the sum in suit exceeded £300 sterling. The decisions of such appeals were final; except that where the sum exceeded £500, a further appeal might be made, within fourteen days after decision, to the king in privy council, the appellant giving bonds for the payment of the costs and judgments that might attend the ultimate decision.

The state constitutions of 1777[2] and of 1821[3] constituted the president of the Senate, the senators, chancellor and judges of the Supreme Court, or a major part of them, a Court for the Trial of Impeachmeats and the Correction of Errors. The act organizing this court[4] allowed sessions to be held during the session of the Legislature, and at such other times and places as might be ordered; directed a seal to be prepared and a clerk to be appointed; prescribed the manner of proceedings in impeachments; gave to it the correction of errors arising in the Court of Chancery, Supreme Court, Court of Probates, and the Court of Admiralty, except in cases of captures; limited the time of appeals, and prescribed general regulations concerning it.

The Assembly had power to impeach all civil officers of the state for corrupt conduct in office. The judgment in impeachments was limited to removal and disqualification from office.[1]

Under the constitution of 1846,[2] the Assembly has the power of impeachments, by the vote of a majority of all the members elected. The Court for the Trial of Impeachment consists of the president of the Senate, the senators and the judges of the Court of Appeals, or a major part of them. Two-thirds of its members must concur for a conviction.

A court of law and equity, called the Court of Assize, was formed in 1674, and abolished in 1684.

A Supreme Court of Judicature was established in the colony of New-York, by an ordinance of May 15, 1699, and continued through the colonial and state period till abolished by the constitution of 1846. It originally consisted of a chief justice and two puisne justices, who were separately commissioned and held their office during good behavior. Its powers were ample, extending to all cases, civil and criminal, as fully as the King's Bench and Common Pleas at Westminster. Previous to the revolution it held quarterly sessions in New-York, and its judges performed a circuit through the counties, once annually, carrying a special commission of oyer and terminer and general jail delivery, in which some of the county justices were joined. Licenses to practice in this court were granted by the governor, under his seal, after a stated collegiate course and three years' apprenticeship; or, whithout the former, after a seven years' service under an attorney. The Supreme Court had a clerk attendant at New-York, who was keeper of the records, and another who attended on the circuits.

Upon organizing the government, in 1777, the powers of this court were retained without change, excepting that the words "The People of the State of New-York," were substituted for "The King," in all cases where the latter had been used.

The duty of revising the laws in force, with notes and references, had been assigned in 1741 to Daniel Horsmanden, then a justice in the Supreme Court; but this, from his advanced age, was not performed. This is said to have caused the adoption of the principle, continued while the court existed, of limiting the tenure of office of the judges to the age of sixty years, to avoid the inconveniences that might result from the infirmities of advanced age.[1]

The times and places for holding the Supreme Court were formerly fixed by the governor, or by laws passed from time to time. The clerk's office was at New-York, with a deputy at Albany,[2] until 1797, when the records were removed to Albany, an additional clerk being appointed.[3] In 1808 a third office and clerk were authorized at Utica,[4] and in 1829 a fourth at Canandaigua,[5] which was the next year removed to Geneva.[6] The number of judges of the Supreme Court having been increased to five under the first constitution, were reduced to three under that of 1821. The general terms were, during the latter years,[7] held at Albany in January, at New-York in May, at Utica in July, and at Rochester in October of each year.

Under the first constitution, the judges of this court held Circuit Courts in the several counties by virtue of special commissions, in which the local judges were joined.

In 1786[8] a Court of Exchequer[9] was directed to be held by the junior justice of the Supreme Court, or in his absence one other of the puisne justices, at every term of that court, for determining all causes concerning fines, forfeitures, issues, amercements and debts due to the people of the state, according to law and the course of the exchequer. A seal was directed to be made and a clerk to be appointed.[10] This court was abolished by the general repealing act of December 10, 1828, which took effect January 1, 1830.[11]

The following is a list of the published reports of cases adjudicated in the Court for the Trial of Impeachments and Correction

[1] Appointed by an ordinance of convention; commissioned by council of appointment, October 17, 1777.

The Court of Appeals, instituted by the constitution of 1846, is composed of eight judges, of whom four are elected for eight years, and four are selected from the classes of justices of the Supreme Court having the shortest time to serve. Those elected are so classified that a vacancy occurs every two years; and the judge elected by the people, having the shortest time to serve, is chief judge of the court.[1] Four terms of this court are held annually at the capitol, in Albany, viz: On the first Tuesday of January, on the fourth Tuesday of March, on the third Tuesday in June and on the last Tuesday of September. These terms continue as long as the public interests require, and additional terms may be appointed if necessary. This court has full power to correct and revise all decisions of the Supreme Court. The judges of this court receive a salary of $2,500 each.[2]

A clerk of the Court of Appeals, who is ex officio clerk of the Supreme Court, is elected for a term of three years, with a salary of $2,000. In his office, in the new State Hall at Albany, are deposited the records of the former Supreme Court and Court of Chancery.

A Supreme Court, having general jurisdiction in law and equity, was created by the constitution of 1846,[1] which divided the state into eight judicial districts, of which the city of New-York was one. Four justices of the Supreme Court were to be elected in each district, excepting in the district comprising New-York city, where a greater number might be elected. These justices were to be classified, so that one should go out of office every two years. New elections were to be for a term of eight years. The justice in each district, not being a judge of the Court of Appeals, and having the shortest time to serve, is the presiding justice. The jurisdiction of this court is the same as that which had been enjoyed by the former Supreme Court and the Court of Chancery. A general term is held in every county having a population over 40,000, at least once a year, and in other counties (except Hamilton) once in two years, or as much oftener as the business of the county may require. At least two special terms are required to be held annually in every county (except Hamilton), to hear and determine non-enumerated business in suits and proceedings at law; and orders and proceedings in equity may be made at such special terms. All suits and procedings in equity are first required to be heard and determined at a special term of said court, unless the presiding justice shall direct the same to be heard at a general term.

At least two circuit courts are held annually in each county (except Hamilton), with the same powers and jurisdiction as enjoyed by the former circuit courts.

A general term of the Supreme Court is held at the Capitol in Albany on the second day of January of every second year,[2] for the purpose of arranging and appointing the general and special terms of all the Circuit Courts and Courts of Oyer and Terminer, of assigning the business and duties of the justices, and revising the rules of the court. The several county clerks are clerks of the Supreme Court, and their seals are the seals of the court in their respective counties.[3]

Court of Chancery.

This Court was established by an ordinance dated August 28, 1701, without the sanction of the General Assembly, who protested against its being organized without their consent, declared it illegal, and in the protracted controversies subsequently held with the governor, who acted as chancellor, they made it a prominent subject of complaint. Some governors, from this cause, were unwilling to hold the court, while the venality and ignorance of others led to extraordinary delays and fruitless expense, to the great annoyance of the public generally, and particularly to those who were compelled to resort to it for justice. Its officers, besides the chancellor, were two masters, two clerks, an examiner, a register and a sergeant-at-arms.

This court was continued until abolished by the constitution of 1846. The office of reporter was introduced by Judge Kent, and the published reports of this court fill 27 volumes, viz:

William Johnson, from March, 1814, to July, 1823, ... 7 vols.

Murray Hoffman, 1839, 1840, before M. Hoffman, assistant vice-chancellor, ... 1 vol.
Charles L. Clarke, before Frederick Whittlesey, vice-chancellor, 8th circuit,..... 1 vol.

The judges of this court, and masters and examiners in Chancery, were appointed by the governor and council, until 1822, and from that date to 1846 by the governor and Senate. In 1823 there were 510 masters and 25 examiners.[1] In 1846 there were 188 of the former and 168 of the latter.[2]

An act passed January 28, 1831, directed a vice-chancellor, with the same tenure of office as the circuit judges, and another act, of March 27, 1839, directed an assistant vice-chancellor to be appointed in the first judicial district. By an act of March 27, 1839, a vice-chancellor was directed to be appointed in the eighth district. In the other districts, the circuit judges acted as vice-chancellors.

This court was abolished by the constitution of 1846, its papers being transferred to the office of the clerk of the Court of Appeals.

Court of Admiralty.

This court, under the colony, had a judge, register and marshal, with maritime jurisdiction, as well in New-York as in New Jersey and Connecticut. The last judge of the court, under the crown, was Lewis Morris. Its powers were continued in the state government, and an act was passed, February 14, 1787, defining its jurisdiction, by declaring "that the Court of Admiralty shall not meddle or hold plea of anything done within this state, but only of things done upon the sea, as it hath been formerly used." The provincial convention tendered the office of "judge of the High Court of Admiralty" to Richard Morris,[1] who declined acceptance, and Lewis Graham[2] was appointed.

John McKesson was appointed register, and Robert Benson marshal and provost marshal, July 31, 1776.

On the adoption of the federal constitution, in 1789, the powers of this court were surrendered to the general government, and have since been exercised by the district courts of the United States.

Collection of Foreign Duties.

In accordance with the independent character conferred upon the state, by the articles of confederation, a tariff upon foreign importations was laid by the state in 1784, and on the 22d of March John Lamb was appointed collector of the port of New-York, and John Gelston collector at Sag Harbor. Their duties ceased upon the transfer of their powers to the general government in 1789.

Circuit Court.

This court was created by the constitution of 1821, and abolished by that of 1846. The former directed the division of the state into districts, not exceeding eight, and the appointment, by the governor and Senate, of a judge in each, with the same tenure of office as the justices of the Supreme Court at chambers; and in the trials joined in the Supreme Court and in Courts of Oyer and Terminer and jail delivery, equity powers might be vested in circuit judges, subject to the appellate jurisdiction of the chancellor.

By an act of April 17, 1823, the state was divided into eight judicial districts, corresponding to the senatorial districts, and no changes were made during the continuance of this court. At least two Circuit Courts, and Courts of Oyer and Terminer and general jail delivery, were required to be held annually in each county, and once in each year such courts were directed to be held by a justice of the Supreme Court in the counties of New-York, Albany and Oneida. Each of the circuit judges was to appoint a clerk for the Court of Equity, to be held by each judge, respectively, who was to perform all the duties of a register of said court; and a seal was ordered to be prepared, which was to be used by the clerks in all equity proceedings.[1] Uniform rules and regulations were to be established, subject to such modifications as a majority of the judges might adopt; and the method of giving notice of courts and of holding circuit courts was defined by statute.[2]

The following is a list of the judges successively appointed to the several circuits, by the governor and Senate, during the continuance of this court:

County Courts.

The Court of Common Pleas was established in New-York by the governor and council, May 15, 1699, and generally had three judges who had cognizance of causes above £5. With some of the justices, they held at the same time a court of general sessions of the peace,[1] the records being kept by the county clerk. These courts were continued without material change till the adoption of the constitution of 1821, being held by the judges and assistant justices of the several counties. Originally the number of judges and assistant justices was variable, being in some counties as great as twelve of each. An act passed March 27, 1818, abolished the office of the latter, and limited the number of the former to five, including the first judge. Under the constitution of 1821 there were five judges of the Common Pleas appointed in each county, of whom one was designated as first judge.

The constitution of 1846[2] directs the election in each county, except New-York, of a county judge for the term of four years, who, with two justices of the peace, designated by law, may hold courts of sessions, with power to hear, try and determine all cases formerly cognizable by courts of common pleas in the several counties. In actions of debt, assumpsit and covenant, the sum in suit may not exceed $2,000; in cases of trespass and personal injury, $500; and in replevin suits, $1,000. They have equity jurisdiction for the foreclosure of mortgages, for the sale of the real estate of infants, for partition of lands, for admeasurement of dower, for the satisfaction of judgments where over $75 is due on an unsatisfied execution, and for the care and custody of lunatics and habitual drunkards. In the smaller counties the judge performs the duties of surrogate. Where the county population exceeds 40,000, a separate officer may be elected as surrogate. Surrogates' courts are held as the public interest may require in the several counties.

[1] The Court of Sessions was instituted by law, November 1, 1683, and afterwards by ordinance, May 15, 1699.

[2] Article 6, section 14.

FIRST JUDGES OF COUNTY COURTS.

Under the first constitution, these officers were appointed by the council of appointment, and held their office during good behavior, or until sixty years of age.

They could hold no other office excepting that of senator or delegate to the General Congress.

Under the late constitution,[1] they were appointed by the governor and Senate for a term of five years; under the present, there is elected, quadrennially, a county judge in each county excepting New-York. In counties with a population not exceeding 40,000, this officer acts also as surrogate. His duties are defined by the constitution, and his salary is fixed by the board of supervisors, and cannot be increased or diminished during his term. In the following table, where the same person has held by virtue of successive elections or appointments, the date only of the first is given, and the last mentioned person is the present incumbent.

On the 21st of April, 1818, each county was made a separate district. Under the constitution of 1822, district attorneys were appointed by the Court of General Sessions in each county, and since 1846 they have been elected. In the following list, the dates before 1822 are those of appointment; between 1822 and 1846, of first oath of office, and since 1846, of election. In about one-third of the counties, the dates between 1822 and 1846 are from unofficial data, and in several instances wanting.

COUNTY CLERKS.

These officers were formerly appointed by the council of appointment, and performed the duties of a clerk of the inferior Court of Common Pleas.[1] By an act of February 12, 1796, they were made Clerks of Oyer and Terminer. The present constitution makes them clerks of the Supreme Court, in their several counties. Since 1822, they have been elected for a term of three years. In the following table the last mentioned persons in each county is the present incumbent.

[1] Appointed by an ordinance of convention. [2] Appointed by governor.

SHERIFFS.

Under the first constitution, sheriffs and coroners were appointed annually by the council of appointment, and no person could hold either of the offices more than four successive years. The sheriff could hold no other office, and must be a substantial freeholder in the county.[1] Since the revision of the constitution, in 1821, this officer has been elected for a term of three years. In the list the last named is the present incumbent.

PREROGATIVE COURT.—SURROGATES.

The proving of wills, under an act of the general assembly, passed November 11, 1692, was vested in the governor, who delegated his powers to persons in different counties. The Court of Probate, as in England, was under ecclesiastical authority, whence the device of its seal—the bishop's mitre, of which we give an engraving. The colonial secretary was register to this court, the fees of which formed an important part of his emoluments. Governor Tryon, shortly before the revolution, transferred his business to Edward Fanning, his private secretary, but the latter appealed to the crown, and obtained an order for its restoration.[1] The Court of Probates was continued in the first constitution,[2] the judge being appointed by the council, with like powers with the colonial governor, and continued till abolished, March 21, 1823, by an act directing its records to be deposited in the secretary's office.

Surrogates were appointed for an unlimited time by the council of appointment, until 1821, when the appointing power was given to the governor and Senate, and the term limited to four years.

The constitution of 1846 directs the duties of surrogate to be performed by the county judge, excepting those counties whose population exceeds 40,000, in which the Legislature may provide for the election of a separate officer to perform the duties of surrogate. Such an officer has been elected in the following counties, viz: Albany, Cattaraugus (since 1857), Cayuga, Chautauque, Columbia, Dutchess, Erie, Jefferson, Kings, Monroe, New-York, Niagara, Oneida, Onondaga, Ontario (since 1852), Orange, Oswego, Otsego, Queens (since 1857), Rensselaer, St. Lawrence, Saratoga, Ulster, Washington and Westchester. Surrogates are allowed to take the acknowledgment of deeds, and to administer oaths, in the same manner as county judges.[1]

SCHOOL COMMISSIONERS.

Under an act passed April 12, 1856, the supervisors of each county, excepting New-York, were directed to appoint one school commissioner in each assembly district. In Kings county, the supervisors of the towns were to appoint one commissioner, and in counties composed of one assembly district, the supervisors had power to choose two school commissioners, and to assign to each a distinct district. At the general election in 1857, and every three years thereafter, school commissioners were to be elected, in their respective districts, by separate ballot. They enter upon their office on the first day of January after election.

In the following list, the last named in each district is the present incumbent.

MAYORS, RECORDERS, &c., OF CITIES.

Mayors were appointed by the governor and council previous to 1821. From that time to 1840 they were appointed by the common councils of their several cities. An act passed April 13, 1840, provided for their annual election, and this practice has since been continued. Recorders have been elected since 1847.

SEALS.

There have been three great seals of the State of New-York, of which the first two were pendant, and the third incumbent. The first was devised by a committee consisting of Mr. Morris, Mr. Jay and Mr. Hobart, appointed by the convention in 1777[1] for that purpose, and was adopted by act of March 16, 1778; it is thus described: "A rising sun; motto, Excelsior; legend, The Great Seal of the State of New-York. On the reverse a rock in the ocean; legend, Frustra." This seal and its reverse are shown on plates one and two.

The comptroller, attorney-general and surveyer-general were, in 1798,[2] authorized to repair, or cause to be made a new seal. A new one was accordingly prepared, and the description recorded January 22, 1799, as follows: "The arms of the state complete, with supporters, crest and motto; around the same, The Great Seal of New-York. On the reverse a rock, and waves beating against it; motto, Frustra above; 1798 below." This seal is also shown on plates one and two.

In 1809,[3] the great seal now in use was ordered, and on the 28th of November, 1809, was first used. It is thus described: "Argent; a rising sun proper; crest in a wreath; a demi-globe, and an

The great seal is attached to patents, commissions, pardons and such other instruments as require the governor's signature.

A bill was introduced in the senate, February 7, 1797, for giving the custody of this seal to the chancellor, but did not become a law. It is nominally in charge of the governor, and is kept by the secretary of state.

The act of 1778 directed a privy seal to be prepared, which should be used for military commissions and other purposes, for which, under the colony, the seal of the governor was used. The device of this seal is the crest of the state arms, and the motto, EXCELSIOR. Three or four different dies have been used; on plate four are shown the first of these and the one now in use. This seal is kept and used by the governor.

In 1827[1] the adjutant-general was directed to prepare a seal, to be used on military commissions. This seal is shown on plate four.

The act of March 16, 1778, which provided for the great and privy seal, also directed one to be prepared for the Supreme Court, Court of Probate, Court of Admiralty and Court of Chancery; engravings of each of these, excepting that of the Court of Admiralty, are given. Of the Chancery seal, several dies are preserved in the state library, differing in their details, but essentially alike.

The Court of Exchequer, a branch of the Supreme Court, had a seal which was adopted July 17, 1786, and is thus described: "Lozengy, argent and gules, supported on the sinister side by Justice standing on a floor, lozengy, sable and argent; each of the sable checks charged with a star."[2]

The seal of the State Court of Admiralty was oval, and had for its device the figure of Neptune, in a car drawn by sea horses, holding in the right hand a trident and in the left an American flag; in the back-ground a ship. Legend, SEAL OF THE COURT OF ADMIRALTY, STATE OF NEW-YORK.

The "Court for the Trial of Impeachments and the Correction of Errors" adopted a seal, February 6, 1786, and continued its use until the court was merged in the "Court for the Trial of

---

[2] An illegible impression of this seal is on file in the secretary's office.

Impeachments," under the constitution of 1846. The former seal is thus described: "Field argent; in the precise middle chief, a sun in its meridian; below the sun, a scroll, bearing the words, NEW-YORK; and round the field, the inscription of COURT FOR TRIAL OF IMPEACHMENTS AND CORRECTION OF ERRORS."

The Court for the Trial of Impeachments adopted a seal, which was filed July 30, 1853, having the same device as the former.

The seal of the Court of Equity, devised by the circuit judges, and filed May 24, 1823, is circular, and thus described: "In the centre an open scroll, surrounded by rays; the word EQUITY inscribed on the upper part of the scroll, and a sword and olive branch crossed upon the lower edge, surrounded with the legend, STATE OF NEW-YORK. CIRCUIT COURTS."

The seals of the several county clerks were the seals of the Courts of Common Pleas, and are declared by the present constitution to be the seals of the Supreme Court, in their respective counties.

The secretary of state was directed, by an act of March 27, 1809, to procure a seal. There are two dies in his office, of which the larger is the one now used. No records have been found, showing when this was first used, or when the smaller one was discontinued, if ever used. Engravings of both are given on plate three. The comptroller's seal was adopted on the organization of the office, in 1797, and has been recently reëngraved. Its device is a harpy attempting to seize the public purse, while a hand holds a dagger to her breast. Motto, NE QUID NIMIS.

Upon organizing the Bank Department, a seal was prepared, which was approved by the governor, May 27, 1851. It is described as follows: "Shield; in chief, arms of the State of New-York; in base, two keys crossed; supporters, on dexter side, an iron safe and caduceus of Mercury; on sinister side, a dog couchant; crest, an eagle on a demi-globe; motto, EXCELSIOR; the whole surrounded by the words, BANK DEPARTMENT, STATE OF NEW-YORK."

The seal of the Canal Department, ordered by the act of April 3, 1848, contains the device of the medal struck by the city of New-York to commemorate the completion of the Erie canal, surrounded by the words, CANAL DEPARTMENT, AUDITOR'S SEAL, N. YORK.

Upon the erection of the office of Superintendent of Public Instruction, in 1854, a seal was ordered to be prepared, which was adopted April 11th, and is thus described: "A circular ring, with the words OFFICE OF SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION in the margin of the circle, inclosing a scroll with the word

EXCELSIOR; and under the scroll, the words STATE OF NEW-YORK."

The seal of the Railroad Commissioners was in the form of a shield, having for its device a locomotive engine, with the inscription, STATE OF NEW-YORK above, and BOARD OF RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS below.

METROPOLITAN POLICE DISTRICT OF NEW-YORK.

The counties of New-York, Kings, Westchester and Richmond were, by an act passed April 15, 1857, united into a district under the above name. The chief officers of this district are five commissioners of police, who, with the mayors of New-York and Brooklyn, constitute the board of police. Three of the commissioners are appointed from New-York, one from Kings, and one from Westchester or Richmond counties. They are appointed by the governor, with the consent of the senate, for a term of three years. After the first classification, vacancies are filled by the board for the residue of the unexpired term.

SUPERINTENDENT OF WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

This office was created by an act passed April 11, 1851, and is filled by appointment of the governor, lieutenant-governor and secretary of state. The superintendent holds his office during the pleasure of the appointing power, and receives a salary of $500. The secretary of state was formerly superintendent of weights and measures, and usually appointed some practical mechanic in Albany as deputy.

SENATE DISTRICTS.

(Page 109.)

By an act passed April 18, 1826, Delaware county was annexed to the second and Steuben county to the sixth district.

By an act passed May 23, 1836, Queens and Suffolk counties were annexed to the second, Delaware to the third, Herkimer to the fourth, Otsego to the fifth, Steuben, Livingston, Allegany and Cattaraugus to the sixth, and Cortland to the seventh district.

The several senate districts of the state were reorganized by an act passed April 13, 1857, under the provisions of article three, section four, of the constitution, and according to the returns of the census of 1855, as follows:

1. Queens, Richmond, Suffolk.
